

ABSTRACT

A vector-controlled, dual inverter system for a three-phase induction motor is disclosed. The inverter system comprises a first inverter system which is connected to one end of three phase windings of a stator and performs compensation of a back 5 electromotive force; and a second inverter system which is connected to the other end of the three windings of the stator and performs reactive power compensation.